with the common officers' swords belonging to our fellows at Malta, and they cut it like the leaf of a novel). Well (to the dragoman), tell the Pasha I am exceedingly gratified to find that he entertains such a high opinion of our manufacturing energy, but I should like him to know, though, that we have got something in England besides that.

Kinglake's Eothern - Internet Archive

Alexander William Kinglake (5 August 1809 – 2 January 1891) was an English travel writer and historian.. He was born near Taunton, Somerset, and educated at Eton College and Trinity College, Cambridge. He was called to the Bar in 1837, and built up a thriving legal practice, which, in 1856, he abandoned to devote himself to literature and public life.

Alexander William Kinglake - Wikipedia

Instead of geographical, historic, scientific, and political details, this journal is more about his own personal scrutiny. It is written in the form of a spirited letter to a good friend--straightforward, surprising, and personal. That quality is what makes Eothern a modern travelogue, possibly the first and indisputably one of the best.
